About the ENA

The ENA is a scientific society committed to the product group of nutraceuticals.

Today nutraceuticals are the subject of intensive discussion in professional circles. With its activities, the ENA would like to contribute to an assessment of this product group on the basis of scientific criteria. The central concerns of the ENA include the organisation of conferences and continuing education courses for healthcare professionals, researchers, nutrition experts, etc., in the field of prevention and health promotion. We also initiate and support research projects with nutraceuticals and we award research prizes at our Annual Conference every year.

Our official scientific organ is the renowned nutrition science Journal, Annals of Nutrition & Metabolism.

Furthermore, the activities of the society contribute toward generating facts for drawing up a meaningful regulatory framework for these products.

The ENA enjoys close professional ties for the exchange of information with societies all over the world that are pursuing similar objectives.
